'Everybody loved Cody'

Parents of 17-year-old killed in wreck grateful for outpouring of support

Terri Ramsey sat in amazement Monday night as dozens of people filled Edwardo's Pizza to show how much they cared about the son she and her husband, Gerald, lost earlier this month in a car wreck.

Ramsey

"We are astonished there are so many people," she said. "We loved Cody, but we didn't know so many other people loved Cody, too."

Cody Ramsey, 17, was killed earlier this month when the mini-van he was driving slammed into a tree on US 62.

Monday night, the incredible outpouring of support for the family he left behind continued with a fundraiser at Edwardo's on Glensboro Road.

Families and friends filled the restaurant's parking lots and every available seat in an effort to help the boy's parents afford a headstone for his grave.

As she watched the crowd file in, Terri Ramsey reflected on the community's generosity and support.

"A lot of people really cared about Cody," she said. "The kids of this county have been wonderful. They still come to see us every day, and we can't tell you how much we appreciate that."

Cody Ramsey, who would have been a high school senior this year, was heading home for a break from his summer job at the county park when he died. His co-workers were devastated when they learned of his death later that day, and organized Monday's fundraiser along with a meal

Man jailed for holding woman at knifepoint

Police say Scott Court man threatened to kill victim

From staff reports

A Lawrenceburg man is accused of holding a knife to a woman's throat and threatening to kill her during a domestic dispute earlier this month.

Thornton

Jeremy Grant Thornton, 37, of 104 Scott Court is charged with first-degree wanton endangerment and unlawful imprisonment from an incident at his residence July 7. He was ordered held on a $5,000 bond July 9 by Anderson District Court Judge Linda Armstrong, and is scheduled to appear in court July 19.

In his complaint, Lawrenceburg Police officer Nathan Doty alleged that Thornton grabbed a kitchen knife during an argument with the victim, grabbed her around the neck in a choke hold.

"He put the knife to her throat and stated 'I'm going to kill you [expletive]. I'm going to do it.'"

He added that the victim told him she was "dreadfully scared of [Thornton]."

Doty said he found Thornton outside of a neighbor's home when he arrived, and that Thornton was "highly intoxicated."

Doty said he charged Thornton with unlawful imprisonment because the victim claimed that

MISSION: POSSIBLE

Christian dentist, wife, brave war zones, deserts, jungles to do God's work

Jess Thompson
Faith columnist

I am always in awe when I meet someone who actually stands out as a Christian. Lets face it, folks, most Christians I know (including me) don't usually look any different from non-believers.

Christ didn't tell us to only pray for those who risk life and limb to spread the gospel, he told us to go, and that includes you and me.

What are you doing to personally advance the mission of God's people to tell everyone on Earth about Jesus Christ? How many poor people do you personally witness to and care for?

Let me introduce you to my new friend and dentist, Dr. David Sperow.

for his family in the county park.

"Everybody loved Cody," said Anna Sundean, a co-worker who volunteered to wash dishes during Monday's fundraiser. "This hit so many people so hard. Everyone's going to miss him."

"He was a great kid," added Jeremy Turpin, another co-worker helping with dishes. "He was always the first person there to help someone out."

Other co-workers helping out included parks and recreation employees Margaret Cotton, Lindsey Evans, Nick Satterly and Worth Sparrow. Kasey Briscoe of the judge-executive's office helped organize the event, and spent the evening filling drinks and helping out.

In the dining room, a table filled with Cody Ramsey's friends reminisced about how they will remember him.

"He was always optimistic," said Whitney Cole. "He was full of energy ... a spirited young teenager."

"He was really caring," added Morgan Cole. "When someone was having a problem he was always there, trying to cheer everyone up."

At another table, Dr. Mark Tussey, the county coroner, sat with his wife and four sons in a show of support for the Ramsey family.

"This was a terrible tragedy for the family," Tussey said. "Our hearts go out to the family, and we're here to support them in any way we can."

Dave Richmond, the restaurant's general manager, said he wanted to do what he could as soon as he heard of Cody Ramsey's death.

"Nick Satterly came in and told me what happened," Richmond said. "A few of our employees went to school with Cody and said we have to do something."

Richmond said the restaurant will donate 15 percent of the sales from Monday night to the family, and was "overwhelmed" at the crowd that showed up to support them.

"It's awesome," he said. "It makes me proud to be in Lawrenceburg."

DENTIST

David's local office here is Lawrenceburg Family Dentistry on Main Street, just south of the courthouse. When I recently had him do some work on my teeth, I learned an exciting story about a husband and wife from our community who answer Christ's call.

"My wife Marty and I started La Cima World Missions after serving in Honduras as full-time medical/dental missionaries," David said.

"We operated a small mission clinic in the mountainous interior of the country and, even though I am a dentist, I was stretched far outside my comfort zone. Our village, Canchias, was way out in the middle of nowhere. There was no other clinic for miles in any direction and that made me the designated 'medical expert' on everything because I was the only one with any kind of qualifications whatsoever.

"This meant that I had to quickly learn to deal with a wide variety of ailments, diseases, conditions, trauma, etc. The most nerve-wracking moments came with delivering babies. That was definitely outside the normal jurisdiction of a dentist, but they still came to us at all hours seeking help.

"I am up to 12 babies now and I am hopeful that is the last of them, I prefer teeth. There were also quite a few bullet and machete wounds in the untamed wilds of the Honduran mountains, so trauma came in a close second in intensity of non-dental treatments we had to provide.

"While we lived in Honduras, we developed relationships with many wonderful missionaries, clinics, schools and some Honduran military personnel. God began to give us a vision for something more than just working in the one clinic forever. We started to catch the vision for what is now La Cima World Missions.

"We returned to the US and formed the non-profit NGO (non-government organization) La Cima in 2003. La Cima's model is to act in a support role for organizations/ministries that are already functional but are in need of medical and dental services.

"We found that so many groups could benefit from adding medical/dental but very few had the expertise, resources, and/or network to properly organize these types of teams.

"Logistics and legalities for taking medical and dental teams from the US to other countries can be daunting. We wanted to make a way for groups to add medical/dental without having to do anything other than provide a location and lunch for each day a team works with them.

"La Cima takes care of all the other logistical and organizational issues so that a team can arrive as 'turn-key' as possible. We are all part of the body and this is what we can bring to the table.

"Marty is the language specialist in the family and she learns the languages of the countries where we work. She also is the cultural liaison and helps our teams understand culturally appropriate behavior and customs so that we can be as effective as possible as quickly as possible with as few cultural faux pas as possible.

"Our mission began by working in Honduras but it has expanded in the past few years. We now have had a presence in Thailand working with orphanages. We have also had projects along the Thai/Burma border working with the Karen (kah-RIN) people in Internally Displaced People (IDP) camps, where people displaced by the war in Burma have been pushed.

"We have partnered there with the Karen Department of Health and Welfare and other groups in the region to aid in training medics that can go further into the war-zone to provide care to people cut off from the outside world due to the conflict there.

"Just this past March we began a project in the island nation of Yap, Federated States of Micronesia in the Pacific. This is a new and very exotic locale and we are excited about the project because we are being directed to some of the most remote locations on the planet as we answer this Call.

"Marty works in the international sales department of Bud's Gun Shop in Lexington, and I am partners with Dr. Robbie Taylor at Lawrenceburg Family Dentistry on Main Street here in Lawrenceburg.

"I also work part-time in my practice in Lexington. We have regular jobs and regular lives so we look at La Cima as a 'tent maker' type mission. We use our day jobs to help fund our mission job.

"We feel that God has called us to use medical and dental care to further his kingdom in hard to reach places.

"When we lived in Honduras, we saw things and did things that can only be experienced and can never adequately be explained. It really changed our priorities around a lot and re-directed us in a way that has led us into adventures that defy description on islands, jungles, deserts and war zones as we answer the call with 'Yes!'

"When we founded La Cima, we used the verse James 2:26: 'Faith without works is dead' as our inspirational verse. That naturally led to our mission motto 'We didn't come to watch!'

"A faith that is real and alive is not a spectator sport, it is important to engage it fully in life. The more we engage our faith and make it an active faith, the more God will honor it and take us on a ride we cannot possibly imagine. Just know it will be God-sized and it will be the stuff that will blow your mind."

Folks, these are not extraordinary people. They are God's people doing what he told them (and you) to do.

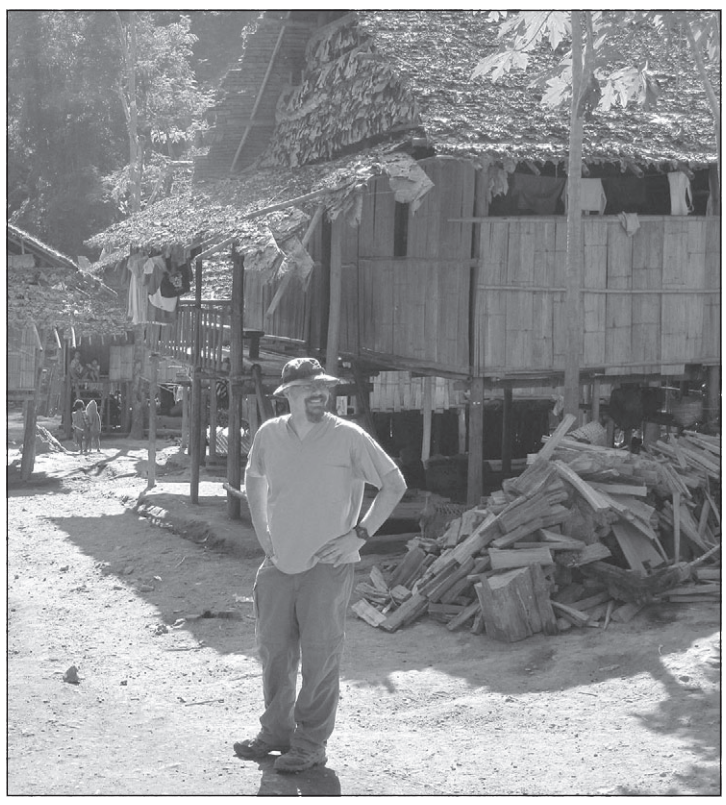

Praise God for his warriors and his faithful children.

Ever thought of changing the world? David and his wife are. Why not you, too?

According to a press release from Color Green films, "Rich Mullins: A Ragamuffin's Legacy" is a narrative feature film based on the life of Christian singer and songwriter Rich Wayne Mullins, known for Christian contemporary worship song "Awesome God."

The scene to be filmed in Lawrenceburg will be the car crash that took Mullins' life in 1997.

City attorney Robert Myles, who has been working with the film office through the Kentucky Department of Tourism on several projects involving Anderson County, said not one business or house is going to be denied access because of the event.

He said everyone is on board, including city and county fire, city police, sheriff's office, EMS and the mayor's and county judge-executive's offices.

"It is really is about bringing business to Lawrenceburg," he said, adding that Anderson County needs to expand when it comes to opportunities for bringing business. "You can't just fixate on one; you have to open yourself up to a lot of options."

Fiddling while Anderson burns

Public demand for merger would end city-county feud

It has been said that Emperor Nero fiddled while Rome burned.

Nearly 2,000 years later in a small central Kentucky county named Anderson, our Neros in city and county government spend more time rosining up their bows to do a little fiddling of their own instead of putting out the fires and getting down to business.

Just take a good look around. Street after street is pockmarked with foreclosed homes. Main Street, once Lawrenceburg's main attraction, now resembles a ramshackle mining town about a decade after the gold ran out. Industrial growth — aside from Wild Turkey — is something that happens somewhere else.

So what are those we elect doing about these issues? Sadly, the answer is it doesn't matter and won't until city and county government first learn to get along.

We could fill a page with each side's perceived grievances. If it's not about water bills in the county park, it's about reserved parking at the courthouse or litter abatement funds.

Yes, these mildly entertaining micro-bursts of hometown political hi-jinx create saucy gossip in the coffee shops, but do absolutely nothing but keep us mired in the last century while communities around us prosper and advance.

Yes, these mildly entertaining micro-bursts of hometown political hi-jinx create saucy gossip in the coffee shops, but do absolutely nothing but keep us mired in the last century while communities around us prosper and advance.

Lost amid the foolishness are the efforts by some to foster growth. For instance, the city/county economic development authority floated a trial balloon earlier this year to gauge the reaction of using the million-plus dollars it has to create an industrial park.

That, dear reader, is a remarkable change in attitude and a clear indication that the old-school thinking that dominated that agency for years is at long last on its way out.

The catch to that offer is that the city council and fiscal court would need to annually pony up about $20,000 each to fund the agency's daily operations.

If you haven't heard about that plan don't expect to again because it isn't likely to happen. Doing so would require cooperation, planning and at least one side (the city) to get over the fact that such a park most likely won't be located where it can wet its beak in the tax revenue it generates.

That "what's in it for us" attitude is the heart of what's wrong, and only a remarkable change in the public's response to it will ever make it go away.

One option to accomplish that would be turning out this fall and electing a city council that cares first about the welfare of Anderson County as a whole, not how to settle juvenile scores over parking spaces and other foolishness.

If that doesn't work, two years from now voters can do the same thing with the fiscal court.

Being that elections here, like everywhere, are largely decided by popularity vs. competence, that's unlikely to happen.

Here's an option that can happen, but only if enough people demand it.

Leading up to the time of his death, attorney Walter Patrick used the final year of his public life to lobby for the creation of a committee to study a merger of city and county government.

During a joint meeting in front of a large crowd of people demanding they take action, each side put on a good show and voted to begin that process, but left just enough wiggle room to back out.

Privately, they growled, raised their hackles and invented enough reasons to let it die.

It's time, people, to growl back, take away Nero's fiddle and send a message that the days of our elected leaders acting like recalcitrant children fighting over the last cookie in the jar come to an end.

It's time for them to settle their differences, check their egos at the door and do what Mr. Patrick encouraged until his dying day — merge.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Recycling bins will be convenient

Editor's note: The following is in response to a letter from Lawrenceburg resident Richard Spencer titled "Recycle bins a questionable idea at best," that was printed in the July 4 edition of the paper.

To the editor:

As committee chair for the Anderson County Environmental Committee, I would like to thank Mr. Spencer for taking the time to provide feedback on our plan for improving Anderson County's environmental program.

I encourage anyone to provide comments, so we can consider these and possibly make our program even better.

In developing this plan, the committee carefully considered many options. It chose to replace the unsustainable curbside collection with community drop-off trailers.

Mr. Spencer voiced several concerns with this option; so, I would like to address these concerns with some feedback from our committee, which consists of representatives from the county and city, local businesses and school system, as well as several environmental professionals).

Mr. Spencer was concerned about increased personal cost for travel to the drop-off trailers. Certainly, if every resident made a special trip to drop off materials, more gasoline would be consumed (and pollution generated) than if the county used its trucks to collect recyclables.

But, we don't expect residents to make special trips. The new drop-off trailers will be spotted at convenient locations, (schools, Walmart and other locations in the county). With very little effort, recyclables can be taken to the trailers (at no extra cost) when going to a store, a ball game, school, etc. The vast majority of recycle programs in Kentucky follow this method (by a margin of 10-to-1).

Mr. Spencer also expressed concern about program costs and revenue. Curbside service has proven costly both in manpower, fuel and vehicle maintenance. The county is currently servicing only about 20 percent of the residents, but collecting only 1 percent of how many pounds could be collected.

The economics for picking up a few thousand pounds that requires driving hundreds of miles through the rural areas of the county is not sustainable in these tight budget times. The county has to borrow manpower to keep up.

This has been a noble attempt by the county to get a recycling program started, but it is now time to grow to the next level. Having more tonnage at fewer locations to haul saves the county money which can be better used to improve the program.

Also, the recycling containers some residents have purchased are still a good investment for storing their recyclables until they have enough to take to a drop-off trailer.

As for revenue, the county currently gets about $2,000 per month for materials from the curbside program, which is currently funneled back into the county's waste program budget. Having trailers available 24-7 will allow more materials to be collected from more residents more economically. Uses for the increased revenue will be determined by the Anderson County Fiscal Court.

If anyone has questions about the proposed program expansion or the county's environmental program, please contact the County judge-executive's office or send emails to greener.city@yahoo.com.

Relay committee thankful for help

To the editor:

On behalf of the American Cancer Society and the Relay for Life of Anderson County, I would like to take this opportunity to thank everyone for helping to make the 2012 Relay for Life held on June 8 a success.

Once again, the City of Lawrenceburg and the American Legion Post Unit 34 provided the beautiful park for us to hold our event and as always, was very accommodating to whatever we needed.

I would also like to thank the many corporate sponsors, businesses and individuals that provided gifts in kind, committee members, team captains and team members that made the event a success.

Although we fell short of our goal this year, we were able to raise in excess of $85,000 which brings the 10-year total of money raised by the Relay for Life of Anderson County close to over $800,000.

Again, thanks to everyone in our community who had a part in the Relay. I am proud to be a part of a caring community that continues to fight against cancer. With your continued support, we look forward to even more success in 2013.

Much ado about uniforms

Meaghan Downs
Staff writer

Made in America.

Not so much anymore.

This week in self-righteous Washington anger, some decided to take a strong, opinionated stance on an issue that affects all Americans:

No, not tax cuts for more the middle class.

Uniforms.

Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid of Nevada didn't mince words when giving his opinion to the press: "I am so upset. I think the Olympic committee should be ashamed of themselves. I think they should be embarrassed. I think they should take all the uniforms, put them in a big pile and burn them and start all over again."

The fact that "all-American" companies like clothier Ralph Lauren make their products in another country shocked some politicians.

Funny. It didn't shock me.

It's not a national secret that fewer and fewer goods are being crafted, produced and assembled effectively and cheaply in America.

The city of Detroit is, unfortunately, our national symbol of this phenomenon.

As much I sympathize with the apparent decline of American-made exports, I don't see what the brouhaha is all about in allowing our Olympic athletes to wear clothing made in China.

The Olympics, in essence, allows America to represent itself on a global stage.

Wearing products not made in the U.S.? Seems to be the American way, considering many "American" goods (Apple tablets and smart phones, for one) are assembled there. It's transparent knowledge for consumers that their iPhone or sweater or even their American flags are not produced here.

All you need to do is look at the tag or sticker.

Not every thing is as it seems, however.

In fact, according to a May report by the Wall Street Journal, more U.S. manufacturing jobs are trickling back to America, and are set to increase this year as well by about 3.2 percent. Not to say that all manufacturing will follow suit, however; the factory sector shrunk for the first time since 2009, the Journal reported in June.

As for Ralph Lauren's recent misstep, the clothing brand

Conservation tips for when rain is in short supply

Cheryl Steenerson
Columnist

There is no typical summer here. Growing up in Indiana, I didn't pay much attention to summer, except to have fun. I worked hard and played hard and enjoyed every day of it. It got hot and it rained, but I didn't really pay attention to either. In Arizona, in was pretty much the same thing. Kentucky is a whole different ball of wax.

Here, summer heat sneaks into spring and then leaves, only to come back again and again. It's like a roller coaster of temperatures and precipitation. Over the past few years, summer just gets hot and dry.

That's great for outdoor events, but tough going for gardeners.

Our landscapes have been built around regular summer showers. Whether it's roses or radishes, they all need water to thrive. We expect it to rain, and then it doesn't. High-pressure systems keep it hot and dry. Lately, they've been the bully on the block, ruling the neighborhood all summer.

In Arizona, all farming fields and yards are lower, to allow for flood irrigation. Long ditches, lined with cement, run for miles. A water main is opened and the ditches are flooded. Spaced out along the ditches (we called then canals), were openings with a sliding door. Doors were opened to allow the flooding of parts of the field. After a few hours, those doors were closed and more were open.

The hours for the irrigation changed, as the water district scheduled when we would get our hours of water. The more land you had, the more water you got. It was a complex, but effective system, and it was cheap. We never counted on rain. We only had two rainy seasons a year.

Kentucky is definitely not Arizona, but we might start thinking about different ways to conserve the rains that we get. Adjust where you put your garden to allow for more shade in the morning or afternoon.

Lower the soil level a little to allow for more water to pool, rather than run off. Use raised beds with a frame that will hold water. Locate them where a water hose will reach.

Make changes to take advantage of the rain that we do get, so we don't lose all of our hard work to the dreaded drought. Drought has become a regular summer feature here and we just have to adapt and plan for it.

I recently took a few days off to work on the farm and ended up spending a lot of time watering. I also took a trip to Indiana to see family. It was a humbling trip. You think we have it bad here?

It's way worse where I went. The yards were the color of fresh straw. The corn stalks looked like skeletons. It made you want to cry.

We should be thankful for all that we have and do our best to save as much of our gardens as possible. Food prices are going to go up, so we should put up as much of the harvest that we can in

Corn, tomatoes are nutritional summer treats

Joan Martin
Guest columnist

I hope your garden is doing better than mine.

I'm still waiting for the first tomatoes to ripen and gave up on the corn. My neighbor says that squirrels got the corn but I think it was raccoons.

At any rate, every corn stalk was broken and some were strewn across the yard.

Corn and tomatoes are plentiful in supply at the stores if not in your garden. Some people think that corn is not nutritious but they may need updated information.

One-half cup of cooked corn contains only 90 calories, is low in fat and a good source of fiber and B vitamins.

Americans consume about 25 pounds of corn per person annually, most of it is frozen or canned.

Frozen or canned corn has about the same nutritional value as fresh.

When selecting corn, be sure the husks are green, tight and fresh looking. Pull the husk open to make sure the ear contains tightly packed rows of plump kernels. Large kernels at the tip show over maturity. If you pinch a kernel, milky juice should spurt out.

Store corn in a cool area, as warmth causes the sugar content of the corn to convert into starch and result in a less sweet product. Put corn in the refrigerator if storing for over a day.

Tomatoes taste great with corn or almost anything else in my opinion. I can eat tomatoes every meal, every day. Tomatoes complement many other vegetables. A medium size tomato contains only 25 calories and 20 mg of sodium. They are fat and cholesterol free, and a good source of potassium and vitamins A and C. They are also a good source of lycopene, a valuable antioxidant.

Tomatoes should be stored at room temperature until they have fully ripened. Keep them out of direct sunlight once picked or they will ripen unevenly. Tomatoes taste best if not refrigerated. Refrigerate them only if you can't use them before they spoil. Chopped tomatoes can be frozen for use in sauces or other cooked dishes.

Put tomatoes and corn together in this sensational casserole.

Summer Sensation Casserole

Makes 5 servings (1/2 cup each)

4 strips turkey bacon
1/3 cup minced onion
3 Tablespoons diced green pepper
4 ears fresh sweet corn
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/8 teaspoon black pepper
1 teaspoon dried sweet basil
2 cups tomatoes, chopped
1/3 cup reduced fat shredded cheddar cheese

Directions:

In a large skillet, cook turkey bacon until crisp.

Drain turkey bacon on paper towel, chop and put aside. Do not drain pan. Cook onion and green pepper in bacon drippings over medium heat until tender.

Cut corn from cob and add to onion and green pepper mixture in skillet. Add salt, black pepper, basil and tomatoes. Cook five to 10 minutes. Add chopped turkey bacon and cook and additional minute.

Pour skillet contents into a greased 1 1/2 quart casserole dish.

Top with shredded cheese.

Bake at 350 degrees for 30 minutes, or until cheese is melted and bubbling.

the freezer and the pantry. If you get tired, just think of the money you'll be saving. We can nap when it rains.

Speaking of putting up the harvest, I had a call the other day from a reader who has been having trouble with her canning lids buckling.

Barbara is an experienced canner and it isn't her methods that are in question. It's the material used in the Ball lids. She asked that I see if anyone else is having trouble. So, is anyone else out there seeing some type of buckling or rippling of the lids? Let me know.

I have been waiting weeks to find out who left me a pillow at the library. I've had no luck, but it's a great pillow with a message I love. It says "Gardeners don't grow old, they just spade away."

When I come in bone tired, it never fails to put a smile on my face. What a wonderful gift.

Now, get out there and figure out what you will change for next year and write it down.

Our ability to remember things is a lot like our rain, some times we have it, some times we don't. Happy growing.

announced Monday it would be manufacturing uniforms for the 2014 winter games in the U.S.

All's well that ends well.

In other news, the Kentucky Department of Education Commissioner Terry Holliday recently warned of the impact federal spending cuts will have on educational jobs, grants and programs throughout Kentucky.

All decreases will be applied as early as January 2013, Holliday said in a state press release. They could even affect funding for fiscal year 2013, which begins in October 2012.

It's unclear how these cuts will affect Anderson County (the Department of Education said it would have more information coming on individual districts), but the current numbers released by the National Education Association don't look good:

· Kentucky, as a whole, stands to lose $61 million per year for the next decade. The Congressional Budget Office predicts a 7.8 percent cut for this year, while the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities predicts an 8.4 percent cut.

· A total of 1,352 people may be without jobs and 128,560 Kentucky students may be affected by the slashes in funding.

It'll be interesting to see if the school district leaves the tax rate flat — which the school board has done for the last three years — takes a compensating rate or decides on a 4 percent revenue increase to garner enough revenue to support its $750,000 increase.

The commissioner advises district superintendents to be conservative in their budgeting for the upcoming year in light of this information.

As the Board of Education prepares to finalize its budget in September, we'll see if Superintendent Sheila Mitchell has taken his advice.

More importantly, we'll see if this news affects the board's choice of tax rate in August.

Remember, the Board of Education approved a tentative budget at the end of May with $750,000 in increased spending, including $500,000 in step and salary increases for school employees.

That budget has already been sent to the state for approval.

But before the budget gets approved, guess what comes first.

Tax rates.

Both the first day of school and the date for setting the school district's tax rates are right around the corner.

It'll be interesting to see if the school district leaves the tax rate flat — which the school board has done for the last three years — takes a compensating rate or decides on a 4 percent revenue increase to garner enough revenue to support its $750,000 increase.

Stevens' campaign war chest nearly double King's

Democrat committees pour $20,000 into challenger's coffers

By Ben Carlson
News staff

Democrat Kent Stevens (D-Lawrenceburg) outraised and outspent incumbent state Rep. Kim King (R-Harrodsburg) by a wide margin when the two squared off in 2010, and is well on his way to doing the same this year.

Stevens, who is vying to regain the 55th District seat he lost to King in 2010, has raised $21,100 through June 21, nearly double King's total of $10,869, according to totals posted on the Kentucky Registry of Election Finance's website through last Friday.

Both totals are well short of what each raised during their campaigns in 2010, during which Stevens raised and spent nearly $65,000. King raised and spent nearly $44,000.

The seat doesn't pay nearly that much annually. King earned a total of $22,209 in 2012, according to the state Legislative Research Commission's website. That total includes money she was paid during special sessions, which she donated to charity.

King

Nearly all of Stevens' contributions thus far have come from state-level Democrat organizations, including $10,000 from the Kentucky House Democratic Caucus Campaign Committee and $10,000 from the Kentucky State Democratic Committee. Both are located in Frankfort.

Stevens also received $1,000 in political action committee (PAC) funds from the Louisville-based International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers 369.

Stevens

King's total through June includes a mixture of individual donations and PAC funds.

King reported receiving $1,000 from the LG&E Political Awareness & Civic Education Committee in Louisville; $200 from Arch Coal of Saint Louis; $250 from Associated General Contractors of Frankfort; and $500 from Optometric PAC of Frankfort.

King's individual donors include Michael Barnard, Harrodsburg, $500; C. Glasscock, Taylorsville, $250; Clarice Hatcher, Harrodsburg, $250; Tonya Horn, Harrodsburg, $250; Harvey Mitchell, Harrodsburg, $200; Clifford Pike, Lawrenceburg, $300; Edward Anderson, Stanford, $650; Louis Beto, Danville, $200; Ken Casic, Lexington, $200; Timothy Horn, Harrodsburg, $500; and Robert Murphy, Lexington, $500.

Woman's attempt to have Family Court judge arrested fails

By Mallory Bilger
Landmark News Service

A Taylorsville woman who said she was treated unfairly by Family Court Judge John David Myles unsuccessfully called for the judge's arrest during court July 2 and was removed from the court room.

Deborah Klotz, of Taylorsville, was representing herself in a divorce case when she questioned if Myles was hearing her case under a proper oath of office. Klotz claimed that Myles did not have proper documentation of his oath filed with the Kentucky Secretary of State and, because of that, he was not legally able to preside over her hearing.

Myles was elected family court judge in Spencer, Anderson and Shelby counties and took office Jan. 1, 2007.

"I executed a citizens arrest," Klotz told The Spencer Magnet later that Monday. "(Law enforcement) declined to take him into custody. They said they would give it to the county attorney and let them investigate it."

Kentucky law does require that elected officials take an oath of office, however, the Kentucky Revised Statute addressing oaths does not stipulate a time window in which the written documentation must be filed with the Secretary of State. It only states that an oath must be taken. The Spencer Magnet was able to obtain Myles' written documentation of oath filed with the Secretary of State's office. Magnet reporters also located photos from late 2006 of Myles taking his oath, which was administered by Judge Charles Hickman. A Spencer Magnet reporter attempted to contact Myles, but he declined comment through a member of his office staff in Shelby County.

Klotz was removed from the court room by two bailiffs when she continued to address the issue repeatedly.

"... she was affecting a citizens arrest and asked the bailiff to arrest the judge. However, two bailiffs escorted Ms. Klotz out of the courtroom instead," according to a written statement Spencer County Circuit Clerk Becky Robinson formulated after reviewing the July 2 court tape.

In the statement, Robinson noted that Myles denied Klotz' claims in court and twice blamed the circuit clerk for failing to file documentation of his oath properly.

According to the statement, Myles recognized that an issue with the filing was brought up four years ago and addressed.

"Judge Myles said there was no reason to recuse himself, (and) that (Klotz) was free to check with the Secretary of State," the statement said.

Robinson pointed out in her statement the judge was incorrect in blaming the circuit clerk for the error.

According to KRS 62.020(2), the person administering the oath holds the responsibility of certifying in writing that the oath of office was administered and the date of its administration.

According to the statute, the person administering the oath shall file a written certification with the Secretary of State's office. In this case, Hickman bore the burden of filing the written certification.

School board OKs $30,000 increase in district athletic budget

Lunch prices to increase by 10 cents

By Meaghan Downs
News staff

The Anderson County Board of Education approved an $83,450 high school athletic budget, a 10-cent increase for school lunches and a change in its drug and alcohol policy at its July 16 meeting.

All five board members were present, including new board member Scott Brown.

High School Athletic Director Rick Sallee presented his annual budget to the board, with an additional $59,362 requested for cheerleading uniforms, baseball field resurfacing and new scoreboards.

Cheerleading, now recognized by the Kentucky High School Athletic Association as a sport according to Sallee, needs to replace its eight-year-old uniforms, he said.

Forty-six students tried out for the team, he said, with 42 girls being split between high school varsity and junior varsity squads. The new uniforms would cost $11,500.

The baseball field also needs to be resurfaced, Sallee said, for a total of $22,000.

"It's an ankle breaker, basically," he said regarding the field's condition, adding that the high school will be hosting the district and region baseball tournaments in the fall.

Sallee also requested $25,862 to purchase new football and baseball scoreboards, citing difficulties in getting scoreboard manufacturer Sportable to service the failing equipment.

Board member Roger McDowell asked if there was an independent contractor that could work with the scoreboards, or if sponsorships with the existing scoreboards were still in place and could be used to offset cost for new ones.

"You tell them the school board says there's 25,862 reasons for them to go down and fix that," McDowell said of the Bowling Green company Sportable. "I wouldn't buy a mouse trap from them."

Along with McDowell, board member James Sargent also expressed his reservations in approving additional spending for scoreboards, saying he needed a positive answer on current and potential sponsorships before voting.

McDowell agreed, adding that the board could hold a special-called meeting later in the month if Sallee could not wait until the board's next meeting in August.

The athletic director said it would take about five weeks to get new scoreboards, with about five weeks left until the first football game.

"You may have to be out there with crayons and paper for that first football game, but 25,000 bucks is a lot," McDowell said.

The board unanimously approved Sallee's budget with the exception of the $25,862 for baseball and football scoreboards.

In addition to the athletic budget, the board also approved a 10-cent increase for full-price school lunches.

According to the Healthy, Hunger-Free Kids Act of 2010, food service director Marsha Rogers said, Anderson County is legally mandated to increase its lunch meal prices to be equal to the federal reimbursement it receives for free lunches.

Rogers said although the minimum standard required the district to raise prices this year by 10 cents, Anderson County's lunch prices are still nine cents under what is recommended.

"If it was not federally mandated, we would not be doing that," Rogers said of the price increase. "Our hands are tied."

Regular lunch prices for the upcoming school year are:

· High school, $2.35
· Middle school, $2.25
· Elementary school, $2
· Preschool and kindergarten, $1.85

Breakfast prices for both regular and free and reduced meals will remain the same. Rogers said district school lunch prices haven't increased since the 2008-09 school year.

The board unanimously approved changes to its code of conduct policy regarding consequences of violating its drug and alcohol policy.

Director of Student Services Derek Shouse, along with other members of a committee, decided to allow first-time offenders to attend Phoenix Academy for 20 days after their six-day out of school suspension rather than immediately enroll them fully in the alternative program.

The 20-day off campus suspension also requires counseling and drug and alcohol evaluations, Shouse said, and lets students go back to their regular classrooms.

If there is a second offense, the committee determines on an individual basis if a student should be enrolled in the alternative program for the rest of the year, he said.

Other business

The board unanimously approved purchase requests for a $19,842 HVAC control for the middle school and $18,569 for the Regional Training Center, currently located in the old Early Childhood Center, for the 2012 RTC preschool summer institute for meeting space, meals and equipment for training at the Mets Center in Erlanger. RTC funds would be used for the institute.

The board recognized the retirements of Tony Kays, who had 32 years of service, and Darlene McGuire, 20 years of service.

The board also recognized former member Benita Young for her years of service on the school board.

The middle school, high school and elementary archery teams received $2,000 from the board toward their October trip to the World Archery Tournament in Disney World.

Atkins discusses next steps for city police

By Meaghan Downs
News staff

For about 20 years, Lt. Chris Atkins has served in the Lawrenceburg Police Department, moving from patrolman to corporal to lieutenant.

Now he'll be moving on a new role — interim police chief.

"[Chief Tommy Burris] kind of introduced me to all of it already," said Atkins, who has served under four city police chiefs during his tenure as officer. "It's definitely going to be more administrative than what I do now."

Atkins

Atkins, who will assume city police chief responsibilities starting Aug. 1, said he plans to communicate with city police and get out into the public in a positive way, making sure people understand officers are human just like they are.

In a small town like Lawrenceburg, he said, citizens need to know officers personally.

"I think a lot of it is, we've had a big turnover rate in the last few years, some of the officers aren't as well known to the public," he said in response to a question about city police's perceived negative public image. "We've kind of gotten away from the community-oriented policing."

Community-oriented policing, Atkins said, involves interacting with Anderson County people outside of writing tickets.

"I'm not a big ticket writer, and I'm never going to tell guys not to write tickets, but that's not the biggest part of our job," he said. "Going to ball games, going to the fair, talking to people ... usually we meet people in negative situations. I want to improve upon that."

Although Atkins said he plans on getting involved with the upcoming "Cops & Rodders" car show with the Anderson County Sheriff's Office on July 21, he does not have any current plans to pilot the city department's own events to promote outreach.

"Any time you can do a joint effort it's better because you have more contacts, more resources," Atkins said.

The city's biggest crime problem, according to Atkins?

Drugs. Any kind of drugs.

"Drugs, in general," Atkins said. "Not exactly meth, pills or heroin, but all of the above."

The officer said the police department currently employs two officers specifically trained by the Drug Enforcement Administration for drug investigations, but wouldn't mind if he had more.

"If we had more manpower I could utilize them more specifically for drug investigations," he said, adding that the department is looking to fill two to three officer positions in the coming year.

The city council approved a $35,165 decrease in the city police department's budget for the upcoming fiscal year in May, a budget cut that Atkins said will be felt by city police. They have the equipment, he said, but hiring more trained officers would decrease overtime and allow officers covering empty shifts to spend more time with their families, Atkins said.

"Our biggest problem right now is manpower, and I believe that's where the $35,000 is going to hurt us most," he said.

Manpower, however, is also the department's strength.

"We have very good officers," Atkins said. "The biggest strength is Chief Burris, who is retiring, made us more efficient and professional police department and I hope to continue that."

Atkins, an Anderson County native, graduated from Anderson County high school and was hired as a telecommunicator in 1993 for the police department.

He was sworn in as a police officer in July of 1993, later graduating from the academy in October.

In August, Atkins will be filling the role of interim police chief for six months, during which time he will be observed and considered for appointment by the mayor for police chief.

"I'm 'acting' [chief], that doesn't make me chief," Atkins said. "When you talk to me, I'm still Lieutenant or Chris."

WEIRD TOMATO

Donald Goodlett, left, and Stacy Lovins of Lawrenceburg harvested an unusual tomato from a garden they share off of US 44 with Glenn Wiley, John Smoot and Robert Wiley. The tomato appears to have sprouted part of a pepper, even though their tomatoes and peppers were planted on opposite sides of the garden, Goodlett and Lovins said. They plan on finding more about the tomato from agents at the Anderson County Extension office.

SNOW CONE ON A HOT DAY

RUTHERFORD LUNCHROOM — 1962

This was the lunchroom at Rutherford School where 112 children may be seated for a well-balnaced lunch, hot from the steam table and served with cold milk from the refrigerator. The clean and pleasant surroundings are in direct contrast to conditons existing before the consolidation of Young, Champion, Searcy, Goodlett, Kays, Royalty and part sof Hckory Grove with Rutherford.

Improvements evident at Rutherford

THE WAY WE WERE

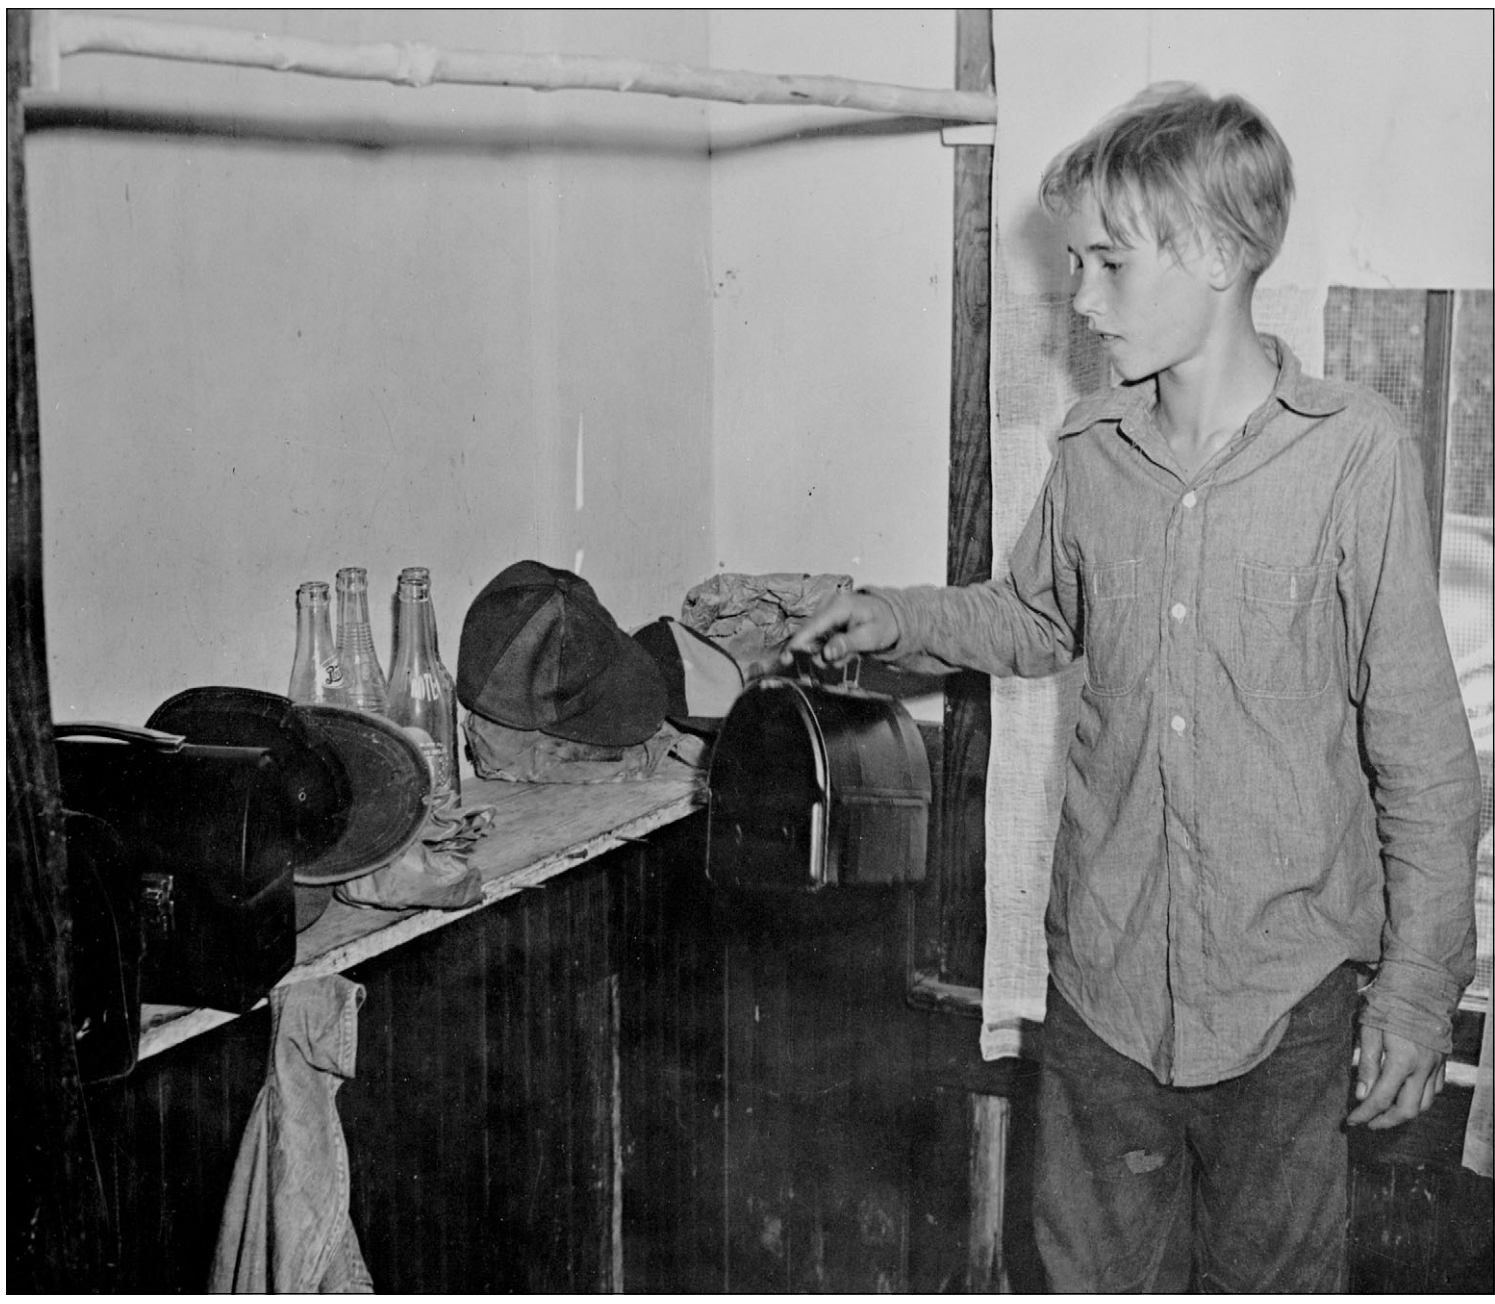

This report from Andrew Bird, Superintendent of Schools, ran in the May 24, 1962 issue of The Anderson News about the Rutherford School.

Rutherford is about 15 miles from Lawrenceburg and serves the southern part of the county. It is the center formed by consolidating in 1949-50 Young, Champion, Searcy, Goodlett, Kays, Royalty, part of Hickory Grove and Rutherford, all one-room schools ranging in enrollment from 11 to 23.

The present enrollment is 139 and five teachers, four them with college degrees, and a teacher there.

Willard Gillis is principal and teaches grades seven and eight. The other teachers and the assignments are: Mrs. Ruth Gillis, grades 5 and 6, Mrs. Emma Mae Hughes, grades 3 and 4; Mrs. Maisie Hoskins, grade 2, Miss Rachel Baxter, grade 1. Enrollment by grades is: grad one 19; grade two 18; grade three 9; grade four 19; grade five, 16; grade six, 17; grade seven, 20; and grade eight 24.

Changes brought about by consolidating these schools that have improved the program are evident.

CHILDREN CARRIED LUNCH PAILS IN BYGONE YEARS

In bygone years lunchrooms, such as this one at Goodlett in 1949, were used in the six one-room schools consolidiated in 1949-1950 at Rutherford. Lunch pails, soft drink bottles, hardware cloth and window screen shown in the photorgraph are below minimum requirements today.

On the positive side may be mentioned better facilities, a more comfortable and more attractive building, better qualified teachers, and general improvement in the standards of living.

Better transportation makes the school more available to the boys and girls who stay in school longer. It has been the history of the school since consolidation that a larger percent go to high school and the records show that the percent completing high school is much greater.

A lunchroom auditorium combination makes hot luncheon available to the students and provides space for community gatherings and school programs.

Mrs. Ruby Cammack, assisted by Mrs. Virginia Darnell and Mrs. Dora Darnell, manages the lunchroom. It has a reputation of being one of the best lunchrooms in the county.

Mrs. Cammack has been its manager since its beginning in 1950.

In one of the pictures in this issue of the paper, we show a number of children in the lunchroom. Three of the teachers are shown in the right rear of the picture. They are Willard Gillis, principal; Rachel Baxter, first grade; and Mrs. Emma Hughes, grades 3 and 4.

The other picture shows a contrast in the present lunchroom facilities and those that existed prior to the consolidation of the schools into Rutherford. This is typical of the lunchroom facilities that existed in the six one-room schools that were consolidated into Rutherford.

Although opportunities for learning have greatly improved in the last decade, and though the quality of the program and the effectiveness of the school have increased, there is still much to be done.

The greatest need here, as in most of our schools, is more classroom space. The most imperative need is to get the first grade out of the basement room that is now being used as a classroom.

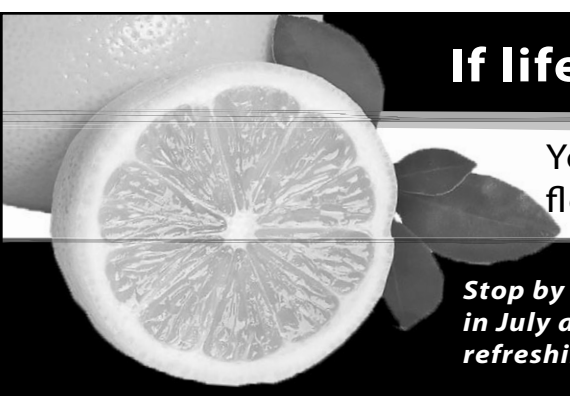

This would provide proper quarters for this grade and leave this room for an indoor play space to be used n bad weather.

The auditorium is entirely inadequate. Since the school is the only center for community gatherings, it should be made to accommodate the numbers who attend them. Meetings must be held in the kitchen-dining room in which the ceiling is supported by posts that interfere with the view of the small stage.

Adequate space for community meetings would undoubtedly bring about a closer relation between the school and community. Lack of room for these meetings is a definite handicap, which needs attention at he earliest possible time.

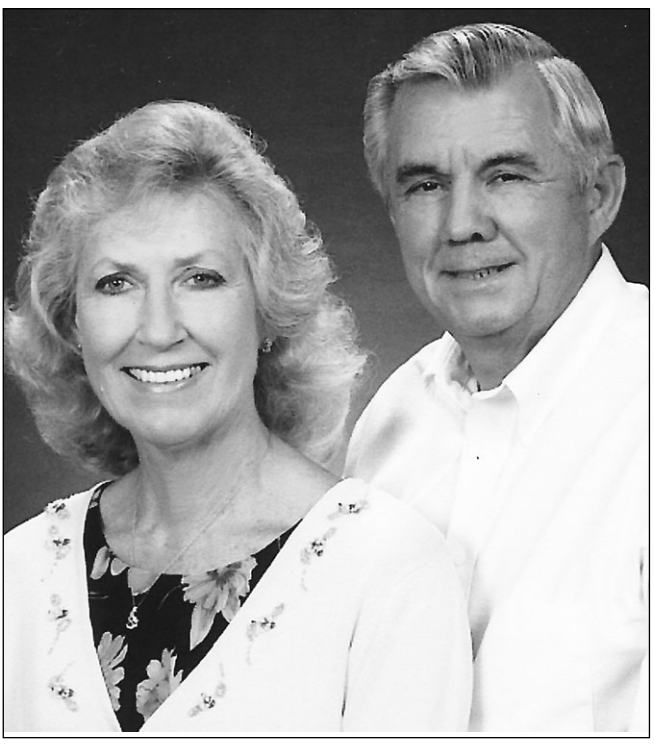

The playground constitutes another problem that needs attention. The rugged land around the building limits the size, and since there is not much level space available, the best possible use should be made of it by bulldozing and providing equipment that can be used in a limited area.

Other needed facilities are library facilities, lockers, instructional equipment and supplies.

Alton Baptist welcomes new minister

From staff reports

Chance McConnell has accepted the position of director of ministries and education at Alton Baptist Church, and will coordinate the church's programs in outreach, discipleship and missions.

A native of Princeton, McConnell is a recent graduate of Campbellsville University with a degree in pastoral ministries, and will be enrolling in Southern Baptist Theological Seminary in the fall.

According to the church's press release, "[McConnell] brings a wide range of ministry experience to his position including participating in numerous overseas mission trips, servicing as an interim pastor, and preaching for Disciple Now – a youth weekend emphasis."

Chance and his wife, Brittany, are newlyweds.

"Having met on the mission field, both feel God's leading toward a life of overseas mission service," the church's release said.

Brittany teaches elementary school in Louisville, the church said.

Alton Baptist is located on Highway 127 between Lawrenceburg and Frankfort.

For more information about the church, call 839-3487.

OVERCOMING THE DEVIL

1 Peter 5:8 "Be sober, be vigilant; because your adversary the devil walks about seeking whom he may devour." James 4:7 "Therefore submit to God. Resist the devil and he will flee from you."

The above passages inform us of the devil's desire to destroy us, but they also tell us that we can resist him. What can help us resist the devil?

Actually, the temptations of Jesus by the devil and his defeating the devil should help us all in our endeavor to cause the devil to flee. The temptations of Jesus are mentioned in Matthew 4:1-11; Mark 1:12, 13; and Luke 4:1-13. Because Jesus was tempted in all points like us (Heb. 4:15) it makes Him the perfect example for defeating evil.

Jesus accepted the word of God as being the final answer in defeating error. He said in Matthew 4:4 "It is written" and then He preceded to tell the devil, God's will. Jesus used Deuteronomy 8:3 as His proof text. Notice Jesus did not seek to defeat evil with psychology, or any other manmade invention. The power to withstand the devil is found ONLY in the inspired Scriptures and then applying those Scriptures to our temptations (Romans 1:16-17; 2 Timothy 3:16-17; 2 Timothy 2:2).

Here comes the devil, will you defeat him?

Cops & Rodders car show set for Saturday night

By Ben Carlson
News staff

The Cops & Rodders 2012 Car Show is scheduled for 4 to 9 p.m. this Saturday on Main Street.

Young

The event will feature a mixture of private hot-rods anc classica cars, along with tricked-out police cars from across the state.

The brainchild of Sheriff Troy Young, the event will serve as a fundraiser for his office's annual Shop With a Cop program, as well as providing funds to send local children to the Kentucky Sheriff's Association's Boy's and Girl's Ranch.

Admission to the show is free. Young said a variety of food will be available, and live music is scheduled.

Young said his office teamed up with Wheels of Time, a local car enthusiast group that shows off classic cars and hot rods one Friday night each month on Main Street.

"They get a tremendous turnout," Young said. "People love to come here for the historic backdrop of downtown Lawrenceburg."

Young said interest in the event has been tremendous.

"Ford and Dodge are coming in, and we have vehicles coming from as far away right now as Bowling Green," he said, adding that the Kentucky State Police also plan to bring four cars.

Police cars will be displayed in the sheriff's lot, and private vehicles will be displayed on Main Street.

Young said those wishing to enter a vehicle are welcome to do so.

"There is no entry fee, but a $15 donation is encouraged," he said.

A $100 cash prize will be awarded to the best GM, Ford, Mopar and Ladies Choice.

Trophies will be awarded for the best everyday use patrol vehicle and best specialty vehicle, such as SWAT, D.A.R.E. and vintage.

Young said his office's vehicles, including Young's personally owned "Andy Griffith" car, will be on display but not entered.

Beshear has been invited to present a best of show award of $400. Young said the governor has the date marked on his calendar and hopes nothing comes up to prevent him from coming.

Young said he has spoken with several downtown businesses about the event, which he hopes will provide them with additional customers.

He said the bakery on Main Street plans to order additional supplies, and that Edwardo's Pizza on Glensboro Road will also be on hand.

Band of Brothers gearing up for another fun run?

Despite graduation losses, don't count Bearcats out

Now wasn't that fun? Want to try it again some time?

You know, that little five-week playoff party that Anderson County had last year. It was a blast, even though the ending was not what most everyone around these parts would have hoped.

But we were realists. Few gave Anderson County a chance to beat Bowling Green in the state Class 5A football championship game and the Purples showed why, rolling up a 55-3 win, the largest final game margin ever in Kentucky. Bowling Green really was that good.

John Herndon
Sports editor

Still, that football festival that lasted from Nov. 4 to Dec. 3 last year might have been the most fun over an extended period that I have ever witnessed Anderson, the county, celebrate in a long time. Maybe ever.

Part of that is just the nature of football. Even when people are questioning its future because of head injuries, it is still America's most popular spectator sport. And in small towns like Lawrenceburg, fall Friday nights are the only game in town.

It is a once-a-week happening.

But most of it was about a bunch of teenage boys Anderson County, came to identify with. In a time when people just a bit older were making national headlines for occupying Wall Street or some other place to question many of the long-held values of the country, the Anderson County Bearcats, 2011 version, were proudly embracing old-school patriotism.

By the end of the season, the team ran onto the field with an American flag.

Their coach, Mark Peach, had told them stories about a heroic group of Army paratroopers from World War II, prompting the team to borrow the name of a popular mini-series as its own. They became, in their own way, Anderson County's Band of Brothers.

On Friday nights, it was a team that played with extraordinary chemistry. Over the weekend, they ate pizza and did community service projects together. It was an old-school group of kids playing a modern version of the game.

They could explode for points – ask Pulaski Southwestern, which was down 21-0 in the state semifinal game before many fans were seated. They could grind out the victories as well.

Most of all, those Bearcats exemplified that never-say-die attitude that Americans love.

Left for dead after being thrashed by district rival Franklin County, Anderson regrouped to get the home field advantage in the first round of the playoffs.

Tied by South Oldham and trailing Conner late in playoff games, the Bearcats somehow found a way to win. And when the Bearcats hosted a state semi-final on the day after Thanksgiving, it was Hollie Warford Stadium, not local stores, that was hopping.

The following week, it was estimated that over 4,000 red-clad Anderson fans drove to Western Kentucky University to see the state championship game. It was the first time any Anderson team had competed for a state crown since the 1971 basketball Bearcats.

It is common to say that the team that officially opened practice Monday is the defending regional champion and state runner-up. That is not exactly correct as Anderson suffered some major graduation losses.

But don't feel bad for the Bearcats. There is quite a bit of talent still around, even though it is young. While few expect Anderson to contend for a berth in the state final again, this team should be fun too. Anderson has the makings of an outstanding line and the coaches are high on some of the young backs.

And remember, some sophomores and juniors played big roles for the Bearcats last year.

A year ago, Anderson was a trendy pick to be the team from the eastern half of the state in the finals. This year, they will most likely be the third pick in the region this fall.

But something tells me not to count the Band of Brothers out.

STAYING AHEAD OF HEAD INJURIES: PART TWO OF A THREE-PART SERIES

Conway, Satterly say safety is first in football

County purchased new helmets but some older eqipment remains

By John Herndon
Sports Editor

John Wayne Conway never played football at Western High School. There never were enough numbers for the Eagles to field a team.

But the Anderson County Judge-Executive has been a lifelong fan of the game. He was stunned when future NFL Hall of Famer Junior Seau took his own life in May and he'd read many of the stories about former NFL players dealing with problems presumably caused by concussions many years earlier.

He had become aware that some former pros were steering their children away from the game.

And he knew something needed to be done about safety in the Anderson County Parks and Recreation Department.

"It was an eye-opener for me," Conway said of Seau's death. "Troy Aikman left the game with the concussions."

The former Dallas Cowboy and now Fox Sports Analyst suffered as many as 10 concussions in his 12-year career that saw him lead the Cowboys to three Super Bowl titles. And Aikman was quoted in USA Today earlier this year that the concussion problem could be part of the NFL's downfall. Aikman does not have a son, but expressed reservations about sending him to the game that made him a household name.

"I wouldn't tell him he couldn't play football," Aikman was quoted as saying. "If he wanted to, I would say 'OK, great.' But I don't know if I would be encouraging him to play. Whereas, with the other sports, you want your kids to be active and doing those types of things."

Several other current and former NFL players, including New York Jets' linebacker Bart Scott, known as "The Mad Backer," will not let their sons play football. Super Bowl-winning quarterback Kurt Warner has been ambivalent on whether he would allow his son to play football and the father of New England Patriots' signal-caller Tom Brady also

Anderson County Parks and Recreation director Nick Satterly displays two of the helmets the county recently purchased after he discovered much of the department's equipment was substandard. The county has purchased 109 new helmets in the last two years but had approximately 180 boys play football last year.

Next week

In Part 3 of this series, John Herndon looks at whether football has become a popular whipping boy without looking at the dangers of other sports.

Anderson wins Little League title

Dowell overpowers Mercer in final, to play in state tourney

By John Herndon
Sports Editor

HARRODSBURG – Even when Mercer County had briefly taken an early lead Monday night, there was never a hint of worry in the eyes of the Anderson County Little League All-Stars.

They were joking and cutting up like 12-year-olds. And they displayed the confidence of the champion they became with a 14-3 mercy-rule win in the District 3 final at Anderson-Dean Park in Harrodsburg.

It is Anderson's first district title in the 12-year-old division and is the first step toward advancing to the Little League World Series.

Trailing 3-2, Anderson erupted for four runs on three hits in the top of the third and never looked back. They plated five more in the fourth and from that point, it was simply a matter of whether the game would go the complete six innings or end early. Anderson scored three more in the fifth, then held off a mild Mercer threat in the bottom of the inning to end things.

Anderson had scored a pair of unearned runs in the second then got a scare in the bottom of the inning when Mercer put together four straight hits for three runs off Anderson pitcher Luke Dowell.

It was uncharacteristic of the night for the Anderson right hander who delivered a moving fastball that overpowered the host team most of the night. Mercer did not threaten again until the final inning but could not score.

Meanwhile, Anderson's Blake Franklin put his team head for good with a two-run double in the third, then scored when Cobe Penny

Anderson County's Jay Smith goes for a layup during the 2011-12 season. Smith scored six points in the East-West All-Star Game, held Saturday in Louisville.

Smith plays in East-West game

Scores six points in contest featuring best of Louisville area

From staff reports

Anderson County's Jay Smith scored 6 points and had 3 rebounds, 2 assists and 2 steals for the East team in the Kentucky High School Coaches' Association Junior All-Star game Saturday at Louisville's St. Xavier High School.

However, Smith's team dropped a 122-121 decision when Bullitt East's Trey Rakes sank a 15-foot jumper as time expired.

The East, made up of rising seniors from the Seventh and Eighth Region, took a 121-120 lead when Gallatin County's Kristian Morgan sank two free throws with 18 seconds to go setting up Rakes' final shot.

St. X's Brock Keisler led the East with 21 points while Butler's Demetrius McReynolds and LaRue County's Kelton Ford paced the West with 18 points each.

Smith is expected to be one of the top players in the Eighth Region in 2012-13.

INJURIES

recently said he is not sure he would have allowed his son to play the game if he had known the long term risks, according to The New York Times.

Pop Warner, the nation's largest youth football organization, is also implementing rules changes intended to reduce the number of head injuries. Under the new rules, which go into effect this year, Pop Warner teams will not be allowed to have contact for the first two-thirds of a practice. Pop Warner is also forbidding drills that involve full-speed, head on blocking and tackling that begin with players more than three yards apart, according to a report in The New York Times.

The Times also reported in June that some are advocating flag football as an alternative to tackle football for youth.

The Anderson County youth football league is independent and not affiliated with Pop Warner but Satterly is very aware of the trend. He said 180 kids played youth football in Anderson County last year.

Satterly said the county experienced one possible head injury last year but the boy was checked out and was fine.

"I played football," says Satterly, who graduated from Anderson County High School in 2008. "Football puts a beating on your body. That is why we only play one game a week. We will play 10 games. I don't want to wear the kids out. When they are tired is when most of the injuries occur."

Satterly said the department leaves the number of practices to the discretion of the coaches but suggests they not exceed more than two a week. He said occasionally teams might play more more than one game a week after weather postponements.

It is all part of what the county feels is a renewed emphasis on safety.

Satterly, who was hired to run the department in 2011, immediately tackled what he saw as a major liability in dated equipment. While parents provide football pants and shoes, the county has provided helmets and shoulder pads for years. Some of the equipment was not fit to be used.

"Some of them had been here since 1989," said Satterly, who found a manufacturing date on one of the old pieces of equipment. "Some of the white helmets were turning yellow."

Satterly, who had suffered a concussion as a high school junior himself, cracked a faint smile of disbelief.

"Some of the helmets were so bad that they were falling apart," Satterly continued.

Conway, the county's top elected official, was shocked.

"I didn't realize the condition our helmets were in until Nick showed me some of them last year," Conway remembered. "Some of those helmets must have weighed five pounds. I don't see how the kids wore them."

The county purchased 70 new helmets, made by Riddell, at $75 each last year. Recently, Conway bought 39 more helmets, made by Schutt, another leading helmet maker, from Aggie Sale Sport Shop in Harrodsburg.

But that still leaves about 70 more kids without helmets purchased by the county. "We have good helmets," Satterly said. "Some people have donated some, too."

Satterly, who also helps coach at Anderson County High School, said the county will have its equipment reconditioned, just like the high school, but will have it done every other year. He said the demands on equipment are not as great at the youth league level as they are in the high schools.

But beyond equipment, Satterly says some special rules and proper technique are part of the local game.

Before the season, Anderson County High School coach Mark Peach and some of his staff offer a clinic for youth league coaches, but it is not required. Both Conway and Satterly said they would like to see more youth coaches utilize the clinic.

Peach, in a separate interview, said he and his coaches share a basic playbook and demonstrate proper technique, including keeping the eyes on the ball and not leading with the head when making a tackle.

In the local league, there are some special rules designed for player safety, Satterly said. "On defense, you line up head up. On offense, there are no trap plays."

Special teams, where many serious injuries seem to occur, are addressed. There are no rushes on punts and there are some restrictions on punt coverage. Kickoff rules are the same as at all other levels, said Satterly, who did not want to come out of the game when he suffered his high school concussion. But after being thoroughly checked out, he was not allowed to return to action nor was he able to drive home after the game.

He recovered with no ill effects.

While injuries will always be a part of every sport, proper technique and good equipment can drastically cut down on players being hurt, Satterly believes.

He's not worried about the NFL stars spurning the game they played. "When a parent says that, it is a parent protecting his kid. That is his choice," Satterly said. "You can't get upset with a parent protecting his kid.

"We've got kids playing in the first through sixth grades. I don't want someone to have a lifelong injury because of bad equipment. You do the best you can to make sure the equipment is up to date. You can't take injuries out of sports, but you want to prevent them as much as possible."

Added Conway, "It's all about the kids. You want to make it safer."

SPORTS BRIEFS

Boys' soccer team to hold signups

Any high school or middle school boys (grades 7 and 8 only) interested in playing soccer for the Anderson County High School teams, need to meet at the school soccer field behind the Freshman Wing on Monday, July 23 for a practice session from 5 – 7 p.m. New coach Mike Brody will follow the session with a short parent meeting for new players. Boys in grades 9-12 can play at any level of the high school program but middle schoolers cannot play above the junior varsity level.

Players interested in participating should be prepared to practice and must bring soccer cleats, shin guards and water. All prospective players must have a current sports physical.

Girls invited to play high school golf

Anderson County High School and Middle School girls interested in learning and playing golf should contact coach Todd Hyatt at 502-839-7409 for information on joining the Lady Bearcat program. All prospective golfers must have a current sports physical and golf clubs in order to participate.

Coaches' Corner to profile Stockton

Coaches' Corner, a local television production on cable channel 6, will be featuring an interview with former Anderson County High School wrestler T.W. Stockton during the rest of July and the first week of August. Stockton graduated in May. Air times are 10 a.m. and 9 p.m. on Saturdays and 9 p.m. on Mondays. The show is hosted by Edwin McKee and produced and directed by high school technology teacher Stephen McKaig.

Mudcats split with Shelby

The Central Kentucky Mudcats' baseball team returned to action last week after a two-week vacation prompted by the dead period that applies to high school sports.

The Mudcats, a 15-and-under team made up of Anderson County High School players, split with Shelby County last week, taking an 11-1 loss in the first game, but rebounding to win 12-1 in the second. The Shelby team was a 17-and-under team and included most of the returning varsity players for Shelby County, according to Mudcat coach Chris Copenhaver.

The Mudcats, now 8-5-1 on the summer, were rained out of a tournament in Danville over the weekend. The team was to return to action Tuesday with a home game against Madison Central and will be in action in the in the Battle of Beaver Creek at Knoxville, Tenn. Friday, July 20 through Sunday, July 22.

Proper technique, equipment keys to preventing head injuries

By John Herndon
Sports editor

Nearly everyone that has ever put on shoulder pads and a football helmet remembers the cardinal rule of tackling: Keep your head up.

While the details of the technique have changed, the long-held belief of not initiating contact with the head is still the basis for avoiding head injuries in tackling.

"We teach the kids not to lead with the head," Anderson County High School football coach Mark Peach says. "We teach to tackle with your eyes on the football and do not lead with your head."

Dr. Gina Wilkins, the medical director of the emergency department at Frankfort Regional Medical Center, says the proper technique is vital in preventing injuries. "There has been greater emphasis on not leading with the helmet when making tackles and the NFL has placed greater scrutiny on helmet to helmet hits. Coaches teach players to block with their shoulders and tackle with heads up to prevent head and neck injuries," she said.

Rules are also in place to prevent helmet-first hits, often referred to as "spearing."

Proper, up-to-date equipment that fits is also vital.

"People sometimes don't think about how important it is to have proper fit," Peach said. "The helmet has to fit properly or it will not prevent injuries."

And sometimes, that means taking extra precautions.

"We had a player who had a very small head," Peach recalls. "We had to get a helmet specially made for him so it would fit."

Many fans and players alike do not understand the role of proper conditioning in avoiding injuries, but being in shape, eating right and staying hydrated can play a huge role. Peach said his staff is constantly reminding players of their importance.

"We try to educate the kids on what is good for you and good for you as a player to keep someone from getting injured," he said.

Peach says injury prevention comes from three angles. "We want to equip the guys the best we can, prepare them physically and teach proper technique."

While much of the talk is about equipment, the latter two prongs of the attack carry the most weight.

"The equipment has continued to get better because of the increased research in this area," Wilkins says. "However, the equipment cannot replace proper conditioning and techniques. If a player is poorly conditioned, they are more likely to not follow the proper techniques they have been taught and injuries can occur."

delivered a bad-hop triple. Penny later scored on a passed ball.

In the fourth, Franklin put down a nice squeeze bunt with Gunnar Gillis on third. By the time Mercer stopped throwing the ball around, Franklin was at third and Anderson led 9-3. Unofficially, Mercer committed 6 errors and at least 5 passed balls.

Anderson had been impressive from the outset of the tournament. In the first pool play game, Gillis fired a one-hitter as Anderson whipped Harrison County 4-1. Richmond American upended Anderson 3-1 in the second pool play game, but the locals responded with a 9-3 win over Eastern National of Lexington. Dowell gave up just two hits and three unearned runs while Penny and Bryce Edmondson both belted home runs.

In elimination play, Anderson rallied from a 4-0 deficit, including a 5-run sixth to oust Richmond National 8-4. Anderson smacked five doubles while Gillis belted a home run. Zach Dennis picked up the win in relief of Gillis.

Anderson will play in the state tournament for the first time on Saturday, July 21 at 5 p.m. The tournament will be played in Prestonsburg. Complete pairings and more information will be posted at www.theandersonnews.com when it becomes available.

Seniors win district

The Anderson County Senior League All-Stars defeated Richmond, 7-2, to win the District 3 title Monday in Richmond. No other details were available at press time.

LEGAL NOTICES

MASTER COMMISSIONER'S SALE

In order to comply with the orders of the Anderson Circuit Court, the Master Commissioner will sell the property described in the following actions on Thursday, July 26, 2012, at 11:00 a.m. in the Anderson County Courthouse, Lawrenceburg, Kentucky. The property shall be sold to raise the amounts hereinafter set forth, together with interest and the costs of this action, and upon the following terms and conditions (unless otherwise indicated):

(1) At the time of the sale, the successful bidder shall either pay the purchase price in full, or make a deposit of at least ten percent (10%) of the purchase price, with the unpaid balance on credit for thirty (30) days. In the event the successful bidder elects to credit the balance, he or she will be required to post bond and immediately furnish surety acceptable to the Master Commissioner. The bond shall be for the unpaid purchase price and bear interest at twelve percent (12%) per annum until paid in full.

(2) PLEASE NOTE: The real estate SHALL BE SOLD SUBJECT TO ALL city, state, county, and school real estate taxes, whether current or delinquent, unless a Certificate of Delinquency has been recorded in the Anderson County Clerk's Office and the holder of that Certificate is a party to the action.

(3) Where the real estate has insurable improvements, the successful bidder shall, at his or her own expense, carry fire and extended coverage insurance on said improvements from the date of sale until the purchase price is fully paid, to the extent of the Court appraised value of said improvements or the unpaid balance of the purchase price, whichever is less, at a minimum, with a loss clause payable to the Master Commissioner or the appropriate Plaintiff. Failure of the successful bidder to effect such insurance shall not affect the validity of the sale or the successful bidder's liability thereunder, but shall entitle, but not require, the Plaintiff(s) to effect said insurance and furnish the policy or evidence thereof to the Master Commissioner, if it so desires, and the premium thereon or the property portion thereof shall be charged to the successful bidder as the successful bidder's cost.

(4) The property shall otherwise be sold free and clear of any right, title and interest of all parties to the action and of their liens and encumbrances thereon excepting easements and restrictions of record in the Anderson County Clerk's Office, and such right of redemption which may exist in favor of the United States of America or the Defendant(s), and any matters disclosed by an accurate survey and inspection of the property.

Looking for a home with a location close to the shopping centers, schools and churches, and where you can decorate to suite your taste? then you will want to come to the pre-auction viewing and be ready to bid at the auction. This home features an entry hall, 3 bedrooms, 2.5 baths, and living room, large den/kitchen with cooking range, refrigerator and pantry. Basement partially finished. Fenced back yard, 2-car garage and a storage building. You will be surprised at the living space in this home.

NOTICE: This home was built prior to 1978 and has the potential of having lead base paint. The lead paint inspection and all other inspections are to be performed prior to the auction. Lead paint waiver will become part of the auction purchase contract if not performed prior to the auction.
